BARNHAVEN OFFERS, for 1959, TRANSPLANTS AND SEED of the original and only Silver-Dollar Strain of Primroses -- grown and honored around the world

Please use your current 36-page Catalog, No. 16, for complete descriptions and culture. Since the catalog was recommended last August by Good Housekeeping Magazine as being "particularly good reading", the heavy demand has necessitated a 25c charge.

TRANSPLANTED SEEDLINGS

See pages 15-18, Catalog No. 16 for descriptions of varieties and color series. Pages 32-33 for culture.

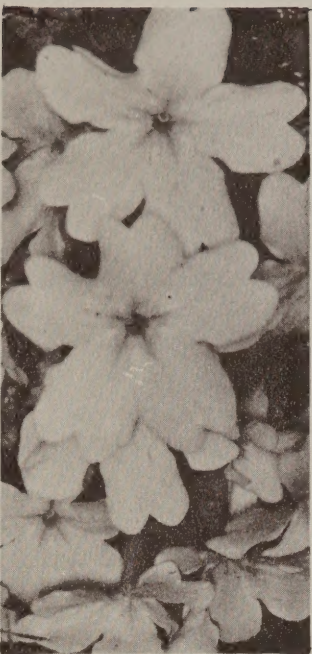

Prices West of the Rockies, postpaid, first class:
12/$2.50; 25/$4.50; 50/$8; 100/$13.

Prices East of the Rockies, postpaid, first class:
12/$2.75; 25/$4.75; 50/$8.50; 100/$14.

SILVER-DOLLAR POLYANTHUS

SEPARATE COLOR SERIES—Harvest Yellows, Spice, Grand Canyon, Indian Reds, Winter White, Victorians, Victorian Stripes.

ASSORTED COLORS—To balanced assortments of the above will be added New Pinks, Marine Blues and Desert Sunset at no price rise.

Primroses may have different little meanings for some of you, but for everyone they mean unlimited color for the shadier parts of the garden so early in the year that the cold is a thing you can almost touch. For primroses are poems written on the spring, created of sun and color, fragrance and rain.

In this age of new and beautiful flowers, Barnhaven's Silver-Dollar Strain of hardy primroses has become the favorite spring perennial. No greater range of color shades exists in any flower today and, although each bloom is over dollar size, all the exquisite grace and charm of yesterday remain. Whether you have room for only a few or many of the following transplants and seeds, each will be special and together they will bring that newer-than-spring-time look to your garden—that primrose look.

Barnhaven's Silver-Dollar Polyanthus grown from seed by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ingalls of Ottawa, Canada and photographed by them in their garden. "Colors and size were outstanding—such poor words to describe so much beauty. It was not unusual to look out and see strangers down by the Primroses. Even the construction workers, installing pipes on our street, were fascinated, and when I went out to see what it was about they said the blaze of color was just too much, they had to come and see what made it."

BREEDING STOCK

Divisions of breeding stock are heavily rooted, complete plants ready for delivery in summer and fall after seed has been harvested. See page 19, Catalog No. 16, for descriptions and prices of these specimen plants. Please include postage, page 35.

HAND-POLLINATED SEEDS

$1 per packet, 6/$5.

See pages 27-31, Catalog No. 16 for description.
